Herbs

*HERBS SPECIAL FEATUREMulti-Use Plants

Herbs are plants with usages including culinary, medicinal, perfume, and in some cases spiritual. Typically, culinary uses distinguish herbs from spices. For example:

Herbs refer to the leafy green parts (fresh or dried) of a plant

A spice is a product from other parts of the plant (usually dried), including seeds, berries, bark, roots, and fruits

A Variety of Tastes

For centuries, chefs developed many strains of oregano for their unique flavors or other characteristics.

Oregano's popularity in the US began when soldiers returning from World War II brought back with them a taste for the "pizza herb."

Tastes range from spicy or astringent to more complicated and sweet. Simple oregano sold in garden stores as Origanum vulgare may have a bland taste and larger, less dense leaves. It is not considered the best for culinary uses due to a less remarkable and pungent taste. Good quality oregano may be strong enough to almost numb the tongue, but often have a lesser flavor.

*SPICES SPECIAL FEATUREFood Preserver

A spice is a dried seed, fruit, root, bark, or vegetable substance primarily used for flavoring, coloring, or preserving food.

Many spices have antimicrobial properties. This may explain why spices are more commonly used in warmer climates and prominent in meat usage, which is particularly susceptible to spoiling.

Other uses include medicinal, religious ritual, cosmetics or perfume productions, or as a vegetable. For example, garlic is sometimes consumed as an antibiotic.

Pepper & Salt

PEPPERS SPECIAL FEATURE

Most Popular Worldwide

Black pepper is a flowering vine, cultivated for its fruit, which is usually dried and used as a spice and seasoning.

The fruit, known as a peppercorn when dried, is dark red when fully mature and contains a single seed.

As the world's most traded spice, black pepper is native to south India and extensively cultivated in tropical regions. Vietnam is one of the world's largest producer and exporter, producing 34% of the world's pepper crop.

SALTS SPECIAL FEATURE

An Ancient Mineral

Salt processing dates to around 8,000 years ago when Romanians were boiling spring water to extract the salts.

It became an important article of trade and was transported by boat across the Mediterranean Sea and in camel caravans across the Sahara Desert. The scarcity and universal need for salt has led nations to go to war or use it to raise tax revenues. The word salary is derived from the word salt because wages were paid with salt.

SEEDS SPECIAL FEATURE

Productions Vary

Seed production in natural plant populations vary widely from each year in response to weather variables, insects and diseases, and internal cycles within the plants themselves.

Plants that produce smaller seeds can generate many more seeds per flower. Herbaceous perennials and woody plants often have larger seeds. They can produce seeds over many years.

Most seeds come from fruits that naturally free themselves from the shell, unlike nuts which have hard shell walls and originate from a compound ovary.

FRUITS FEATURED ITEM

Dates

An Energizer Food

The date palm was one of the first cultivated trees and domesticated more than 5,000 years ago. It grew abundantly (producing 100 lbs. of fruit a year for 60+ years on average) that dates were the cheapest of staple foods. Whether fresh or dried, they helped give character to meat dishes and grain pies. They were even valued by travelers for their energy and recommended as stimulants against fatigue.

Beans

BEANS SPECIAL FEATURE

Smart & Valuable Plants

Beans are one of the longest-cultivated plants. As a heliotropic plant, the leaves tilt throughout the day to face the sun. At night, they go into a folded "sleep" position.

Beans are an important source of protein. Additionally, beans have a significant amount of fiber and soluble fiber. One cup of cooked beans provide between 9-13 grams of fiber. Soluble fiber can help lower blood cholesterol. Beans are also high in complex carbohydrates, folate, and iron.

*GRAINS SPECIAL FEATUREMost Commonly Consumed for Energy

Grains are small, hard, dry seeds, harvested for human or animal consumption. The two main types are cereals such as wheat and rye, and legumes such as beans and soybeans. Cereal grains contain a substantial amount of starch, a carbohydrate that provides dietary energy.

*All content in this catalog is CONFIDENTIAL. Prices, unless otherwise indicated, are per pound and subject to change without notice. Some items may require additional lead time.

Rice

*RICE SPECIAL FEATUREAn Agricultural Commodity

Rice is the seed of the grass species Oryza sativa (Asian rice) or Oryza glaberrima (African rice). As a cereal grain, it is the most widely consumed staple food for a large part of the world's human population, especially in Asia. Rice is the most important grain with regard to caloric intake, providing more than one-fifth of the calories consumed worldwide.

RICE FEATURED ITEM

Spanish Rice

Spanish rice is a Mexican side dish made from white rice, tomatoes, garlic, onions, and other ingredients. It is traditionally made by sautéing the rice in a skillet until it is golden brown. Water or chicken broth is added along with chopped tomatoes or tomato sauce.

Spanish rice is a popular dish in the American Southwest and sometimes called "Mexican rice." However Mexican rice uses cumin and Spanish rice uses saffron.

*VEGETABLES SPECIAL FEATURENo Parts Wasted

The word vegetable comes from the French language and was originally applied to all plants. Defining a "vegetable" is hard because so many different parts of a plant are consumed as food: roots, tubers, bulbs, corms, stems, leaf stems, leaf sheaths, leaves, buds, flowers, fruits, and seeds. A more precise definition is "any plant part consumed for food that is not a fruit or seed, but including mature fruits that are eaten as part of a main meal."

OILS & VINEGARS FEATURED ITEM

Balsamic Vinegar

Originating from Italy, the original and costly traditional balsamic vinegar is made from a reduction of cooked white Trebbiano grape juice and used as a condiment. It is highly valued by modern chefs and gourmet food lovers. Today an inexpensive imitation is widely available and more common.

Gourmet Spice Company

Superior quality spices are one of the most important ingredients in culinary today.

90% or higher of all spices in this country are ground in India. However, 98.5% of Gourmet Spice Company's spices are ground right here in Chicago, not overseas!

We source out some of the highest oil content spices in the industry.

Chefs who use Gourmet Spice Company know quality and the difference we make in their finished product.
